Adolescent Motivations for School Reading questionnaire (AMSR) (Coddington, 2009) is a measure of six constructs of motivation in Reading/Language Arts class. Three of the constructs (intrinsic motivation, self-efficacy, prosocial interactions) represent aspects that affirm reading related activities. The other three constructs (avoidance, perceived difficulty, antisocial interactions) represent volitional aspects of the self that undermine reading related activities. The questionnaire consists of 7 items per construct for a total of 42 items. Students are told that readings for school can include any of the following: non-fiction books, fiction books, textbooks, Web sites, newspapers, or magazines. After completing two sample items as a class, middle school students read the statements silently and respond to each item by circling the most accurate reflection of their perceptions on a scale of 1 to 4 (1 = Not At All Like Me, 2 = Not Like Me, 3 = Somewhat Like Me, 4 = A Lot Like Me). The questionnaire items can also be read aloud by the teacher or researcher to students with reading difficulties. Students should be given ample time to complete the questionnaire without rushing. Teachers or researchers should monitor student progress to ensure students are reading each item carefully and responding thoughtfully. The majority of students in our study completed the questionnaire in 10-15 minutes. Reliability and factor analysis information is included for each construct in the reference (Coddington, 2009).

School Reading Questionnaire

Please read the following statements and select the response that best fits how YOU feel about reading for your Language Arts/Reading class this school year.

When answering the questions think about anything you read for Language Arts/Reading class this school year. This could include any of the following materials: fiction books, non-fiction books, textbooks, magazines, newspapers, and Web sites.

For each question think about how similar the statement is to YOU and how YOU feel about reading for your Language Arts/Reading class this school year. Decide whether the statement is: a lot like you, somewhat like you, not like you or not at all like you.
